Looney Tunes

1.1 Looney Tunes – Merrie Melodies

Front Side:

Description

Faithfully rendered in rich detail, the characters are seen emerging from the circular opening towards the viewer. Bugs Bunny stands in the centre in a true entertainer's pose, while below him sits the Tasmanian Devil. Peering over Bugs' shoulder is the amorous skunk, Pepé Le Pew and Pussyfoot. Also appearing over Bugs' shoulder is Daffy Duck and Sylvester, both bearing wide smiles. Last but not least is Tweety.

1.2 Looney Tunes – 4 Coin Set

Front Side:

Description

From 1942 until the late 1960s, Looney Tunes were the most popular animated shorts to be shown in film theatres. But as the golden era wound down, television would be the one to keep the laughs going by introducing the characters and their (mis)adventures to new generations.

In keeping with the playful nature of Looney Tunes, each coin features a hidden surprise element—look closely.

1.3 Looney Tunes – Gold Coin and Watch – Bugs Bunny and Friends

Front Side:

Description

Dynamic movement created by the characters bring this design to life, much like the end credits after each cartoon and the famous line “That’s all Folks!”. As the star of the ‘show’, Bugs Bunny is the centre focus. The other characters are sometimes portrayed as antagonists: there’s Wile E. Coyote, Tasmanian Devil, Daffy Duck, and Marvin the Martian.

1.4 Looney Tunes – Tweety Bird

Front Side:

Description

Despite his small size and seemingly innocent expression, Tweety has a strong sense of self-preservation that prevents Sylvester the Cat from making an easy meal out of him.

Appearing together in more than 40 cartoons from the classic series, their endless antics have made them one of animation's most successful duos, and two of the most popular Looney Tunes characters.
